Joe-Pye weed (Eutrochium spp.) provides nectar for Monarchs and other butterflies. SDSU Extension Master Gardeners can suggest plants to attract butterflies and bees and provide valuable pollinator habitat.

SDSU Extension Master Gardeners receive training from South Dakota State University faculty, then volunteer to share their knowledge and expertise in their communities.

Master Gardener Program

Master Gardeners are trained volunteers that provide research-based horticultural information to help others improve the quality of their lives.

Master Gardeners Can Assist You

SDSU Extension Master Gardeners have varying areas of expertise and programs that are tailored to local needs and opportunities. We can help with:

DEMONSTRATING gardening techniques in school, community and Master Gardener demonstration gardens.

DIAGNOSING plant and pest problems.

LEADING classes and workshops on a variety of gardening topics.

EDUCATING the public at community events and fairs.

Contact the SDSU Extension Master Gardener Club nearest you for more information about their services. Club listings can be found at iGrow.org.
